Farmington, Arkansas

Colorful History Spans Nearly 150 Years

Although not incorporated into a city until 1946, what we know as Farmington was first settled about 1828 - soon after Washington County was first opened to white settlers and nearly eight years before Arkansas gained statehood.

The early pioneers settled on several thousand acres of land in and around what is now the city of Farmington. Among the first to make their homes here were the Henry Tolletts, the John Connors, the Samuel Wilsons (who laid claim to 1,160 acres), the Henry Trents, the William Woodruffs, the William his wife Sally joined with the Kinnebrughs, Woodruffs, Woolseys, and the William Polsons to form the Ebenezer Methodist Church. Services were held in the Trent home, with Josiah as preacher, until a one-room, log church was erected in 1834. The building - featuring backless, split-log benches - also served as the local school house and community gathering place.

Falling into decay after a few years had passed, Ebenezer was abandoned in 1848 in favor of another, similar building on Kinnebrugh land. The new site was named "Hawthorn" because of trees of that name growing nearby.

A second Ebenezer Church and school was built in 1850 on land which is now part of the Farmington Cemetery.

In 1850 the Wilson Shreve family migrated to this area from Kentucky. Establishing a farm (north of Farmington) in 1851, they raised livestock and grew crops including grains and tobacco. Direct descendents of the Shreves still live on this farm today.

William H. Engels, born near Batesville in 1830, moved to the Farmington valley at age five to be raised by his uncles, the Allen Brothers. He brought the first steam thresher to Washington County in 1844 and in 1856 married the Kinnebrugh daughter, Isabella. His reaper, obtained in 1857, was also a county first.

In 1858 Engels established one of the county's earliest grist mills about one mile south of the community. Powered at first by horses, mules, and other animals, the mill was switched to steam after being moved into the village. Both Confederates and Federals patronized the mill during the Civil War, at which time the community was known as Engels Mill.

In later years Engels sold his mill to John Cato and Abe Allen. Allen sold out to Cato soon after, and the business was converted to a distillery. At first, leftover mash from the brewing process was piped into nearby troughs; several incidents of drunken hogs roaming through the community, however, Farmington Methodist Church, built in 1892, still holds regular services each week.

Allens, the Abraham Allens, the George A. Pettigrews, and the Samuel Woolseys (a family boasting 13 "young 'uns"). These homesteaders came from various parts of the East, as did James and Jane Kinnebrugh. Purchasing a large amount of land after their arrival in 1828, the Kinnebrughs soon became important members of the community and were the largest land owners in the valley by the time of James' death in 1842.

The Farmington Methodist Church was first established in the Henry Trent home in 1831. Two years later in 1833, Josiah Trent (son of Henry) and made the owners decide to pipe the swill away from the settlement. (The distillery was later converted into a flour mill, before burning down in 1933. A neighboring rock house, built to lock up barrels of whiskey, eventually crumbled to the ground.)

Around 1868 Engels divided the land on which the community now stands into streets and lots, selling each 50' x 150' lot for $25.00 to encourage newcomers. Because of the area's rich farmland and of the fact that nearly every family farmed, Engels named his new town "Farmington." The town's eastern border at that time extended to where the Cardinal Drive-In now stands.

The town soon gained a blacksmith shop, wagon factory, combination general and drug store, and a doctor. Engels' next goal - a post office - was achieved in June of 1868. William Martindale, a local miller, became the first Farmington postmaster and served until October, when Engels took over for a yearly wage of $1.00. First located in a mill, the post office was soon moved into a room in the hall of the Engels home. Mail was brought in and carried out of town by horseback; stamps were cancelled by an inked thumbprint. (There have been ten postmasters since W. H. Engels; their names and first years of commission are: John Reed, 1881; Robert Mays, 1889; James Rieff, 1892; William Mays, 1898; George Dunlap, 1907; Jesse Sidwell, 1908; W. E. Guilliams, 1914; Clara Broyles, 1941; Russell Broyles, 1966; and Raymond Elkins, 1971.)

The Farmington Cemetery was established about this time (1870). The oldest known grave is that of Josiah Norwood, who died in 1870 at the age of 68, although there are a number of blank markers that could have been placed earlier. This burial ground is distinctive in that many complete families, especially those of the early pioneers, are interred there. Several interesting inscriptions can be found on markers at the cemetery, located at the corner of Goose Creek and Rheas Mill roads in the city of Farmington.

A community telephone was installed at the general store in the early 1880's. By yelling as loud as possible, one could carry on somewhat of a conversation with such faraway places as Fayetteville over the huge, battery-operated "new-fangled" instrument.

A two-room brick building was erected in 1891 as a school house. This building, still in use, is the north end of the present Agri./Shop building of the high school.

The land on which the present Farmington Methodist Church stands was donated by W. H. Engels in 1890. The buildings, finished in 1892, was dedicated in an all-day service and picnic dinner. For years Farmington was a haven for both active and retired pastors. Well over 50 different pastors have served the Methodist Church since Josiah Trent preached at Old Ebenezer in the 1830's.

The cornerstone of Masonic Hall was laid in 1893. The Farmington chapter of the Masons organization was chartered in January, 1873 (State of Arkansas, #291) with A. J. Gilliland as Master, B. F. Smith as Senior Warden, and Abe Shook, S. R. Shreve, J. C. Grace, E. H. Wilson, and Z. M. Pettigrew. The building, now 83 years old, is still in use.

Around the turn of the century, the now-famous Stark Brothers Nursery began operation of a thriving nursery stock business in Farmington (their headquarters were located on what is now the Griff Wilson place) that provided many jobs for area residents. The nursery, though still active, has been on a much smaller scale since the mid-1940's.

The Ozark and Cherokee Central railroads began running through this area about 1901, on land donated by W. H. Engels. Both passenger and freight services were offered on the Fayetteville-to-Muskogee (OKLA.) route - westward in the morning and eastward at night. A popular local pastime was watching the train come in on Sunday evenings. Outgoing mailbags were snatched off a crane as the train neared the depot, with bags of incoming mail tossed onto the station platform as the train passed through. Great amounts of nursery stock, eggs, chickens, fruits, and vegetables went out by freight.

As more and more people gave up farming to work in neighboring cities and towns, the need for a railroad running through Farmington lessened. The decrease in activity of the nursery and other local businesses also helped in the decision to stop service through the town, an event which occurred about 1942. Traces of the old railroad can still be seen in various places around the city.

A new school house was built in 1926, and two years later Farmington Schools graduated its first senior class.

Grocery and dry goods stores did a thriving business as farming went out. Among the first founded in this century in Farmington were: McNeal's Dry Goods, established in 1916 and closed only recently (1975); White's Grocery, still in operation; and Phillips Superette, also in operation today. There are also Davis' Grocery and the newest additions, Wilson's Kwiki and Speedway 7-11. All are situated on Main Street (Hwy. 62), as is a busy laundromat.

Farmington became a city in 1946 with Capt. Sidney Wade (Ret.) as its first mayor. Succeeding him through the years have been J. B. White, Vol Mitchell, Thornton Buchanan, and current mayor Bobby Carlisle.

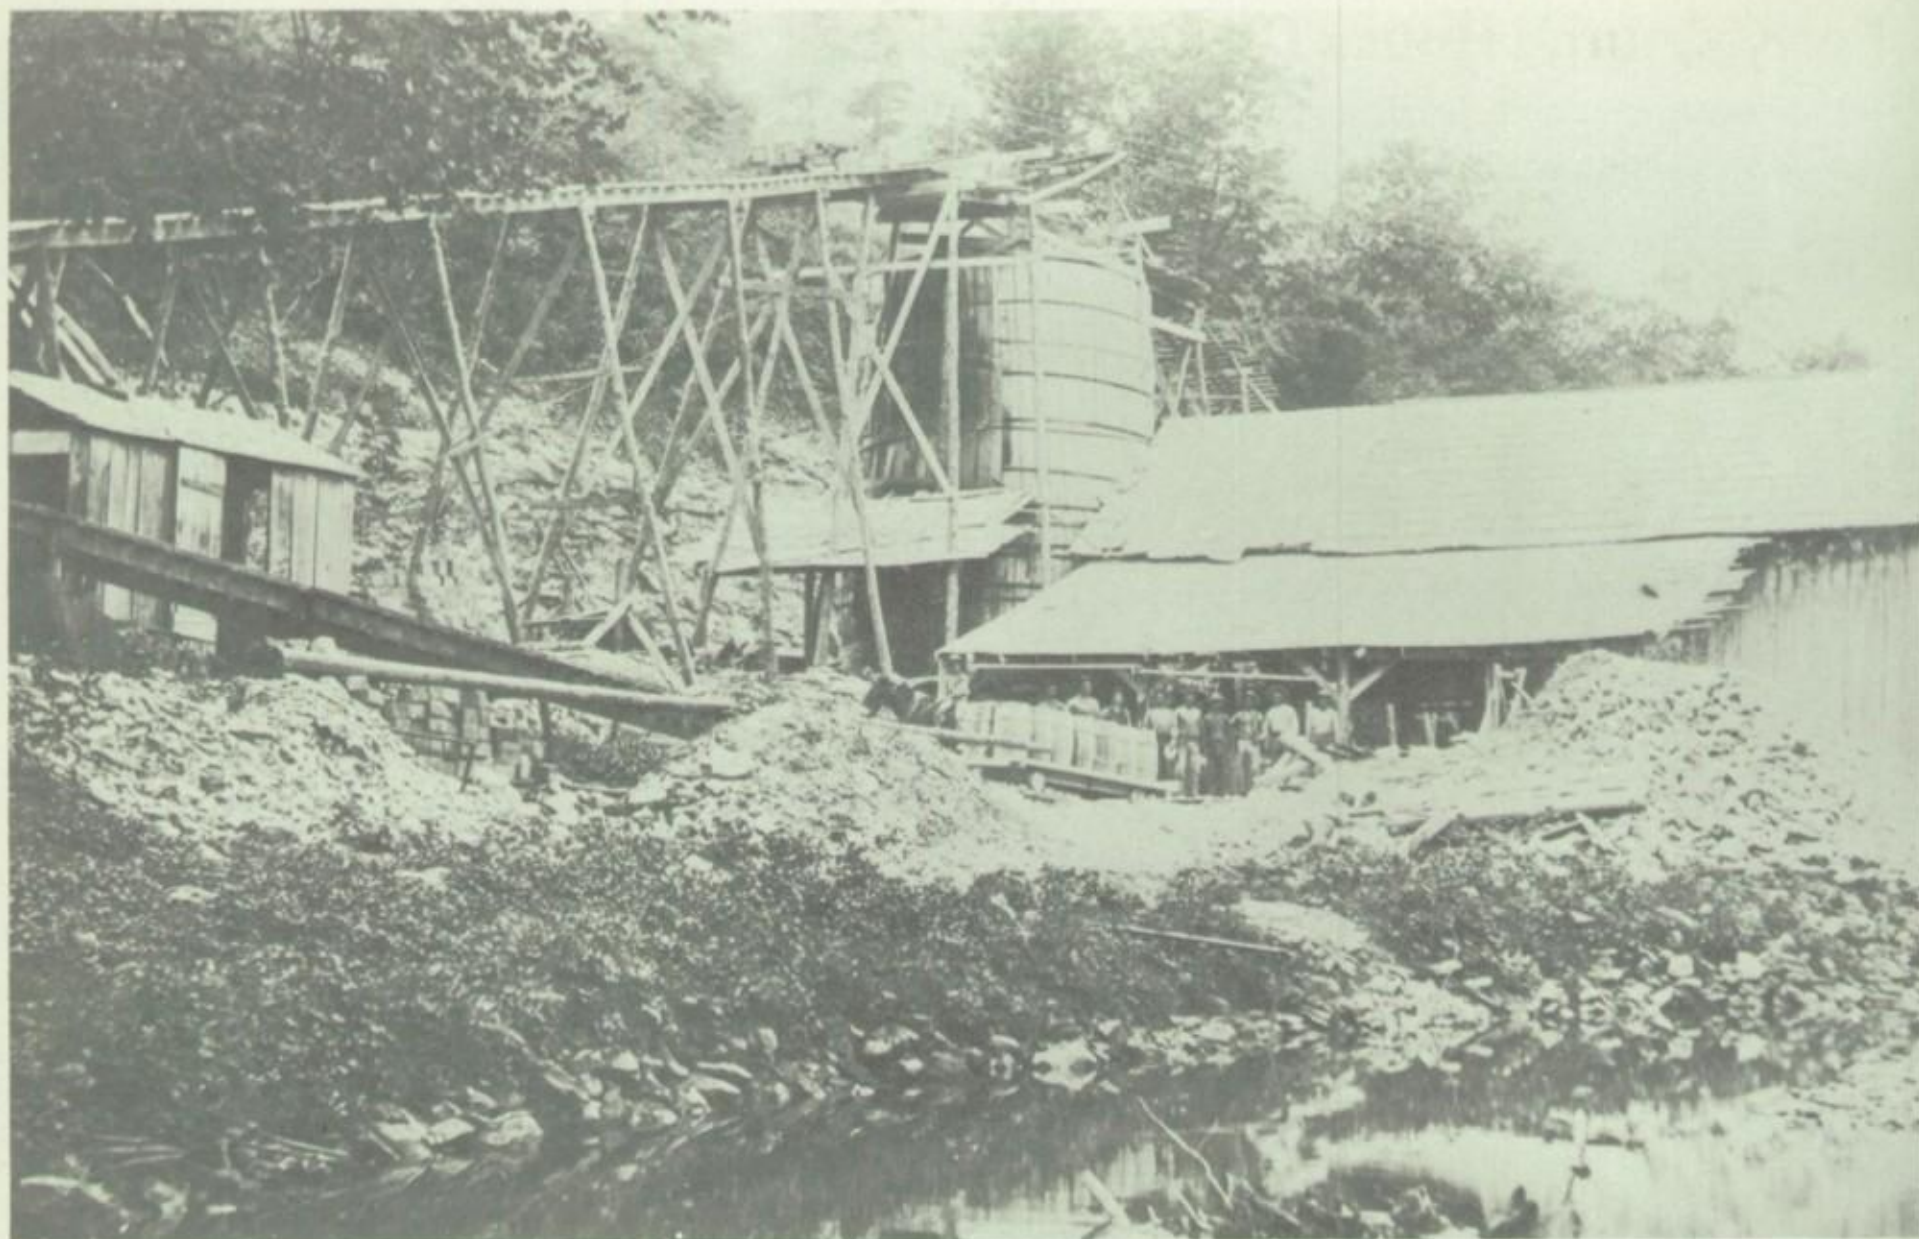

Farming, as it was first known, is now almost a thing of the past. Area agricultural pursuits intended for commercial sale today center mainly on the raising of poultry and livestock and the growing of hay, grains, grapes, and strawberries. Most farm products produced now are meant for personal use only.

Over the years the city has grown both in size and population. The city limits now encompass roughly three square miles; many areas not included within city limits are considered as part of the community. The official population has risen from about 150 in the mid-1940's to the 1,100 set by the last census and has grown markedly even since that last accounting.

The city has a police department, volunteer fire department, and sanitation service, with a long-sought sewer system under construction at this writing. The post office, moved several times since it occupied part of the Engels home, is now housed in a colonial-style structure built in late 1975 for just that purpose. Mayor Carlisle and the City Council work to govern rapidly-developing Farmington, named in 1975 as an official American Bicentennial City.

With the help of federal matching funds, the city is (at this writing) in the process of making a long-desired and much-needed City Park a reality. The eight-acre site will have athletic fields, barbecue pits, benches, and restroom facilities. Future plans include additional recreational equipment and possibly an auditorium-like structure.

Farmington has come a long, long way since Josiah Trent, accompanied by a Negro boy, rode into the settlement, pitched a tent, and began making his home here nearly 150 years ago. Though many persons leave the area seeking "greener pastures," a great number eventually come back and live out their lives in the beauty and peace of the Farmington valley, watching the sun set each day on a progressive city that has not forgotten the old-fashioned friendliness and helpfulness of its founding families.

Early Church House Doubled As School

The growth of the Farmington school system, an institution that has always been an important part of the community, has been reciprocal with the growth of Farmington itself throughout the years.

The first school here, called Ebenezer, began about 1834 in a local church house of the same name (on land now owned by Thornton Buchanan). Little is known of this first school.

By 1848 the building had decayed to the extent that both church services and school session were moved to a similar one-room log structure (built with logs from the A. B. "Gus" Lewis place on land that was donated by W. H. Engels and is now owned by Russell Broyles). The new building, "raised" in one day by local men, was 18' x 20' and had two windows (one small one and one measuring 1½ x 8'); rough wooden shingles composed the roof, and the walls were chinked with mud and clay. A large box wood stove, one of Washington County's first, was shipped in from Ohio to heat the room. This school was named "Hawthorn" by one of its first teachers, Martin K. Walker, because of the trees which surrounded it.

One Hawthorn alumnus recalled that his teacher, a Franklin Lonbarger, would rap on the doorway with a hickory stick to call students in from play. No one was allowed to leave school grounds without special permission. (Once, when a boy was about to be punished for walking outside the boundary to retrieve a stray ball, a free-for-all fight started and ended with all older boys being kicked out of school.) Punishment for disobeying rules included a switching, wearing a dunce cap, holding one's nose in a chalk ring, staying in at recess, or 'riding a rail' for several hours.

A new school and church, again designated as Ebenezer, was built about 1850 on land donated by Andrew Allen. A subscription (tuition) school was conducted here throughout the Civil War by Miss Sultana Trent, who lived in the school and taught a few children there to prevent it from being torn down by Federals for use in building barracks in Fayetteville.

According to an account by the late H. B. Shreve (who attended Ebenezer from 1875 to 1883), there were six months of "free" (tax-supported) school each year unless money ran out sooner than expected. When Shreve first started at Ebenezer, there were 20 students enrolled; by his last year there were over 40. The school's drinking water was carried from Engels Spring each day by the larger boys. Marbles, baseball, "pop the whip," "cat," and "3 out and 6 in" were popular at recess and noontime. On Friday afternoons there were speeches, readings, and spelling bees.

An advertisement in the October 28, 1871 issue of the FAYETTEVILLE DEMOCRAT told of a "Farmington Male and Female Institute" that had opened its 20-week session on September 8th of that year. The announcement stated that "The best facilities are here offered for a thorough English and classical education." Monthly tuition was $2.00 for primary grades, $3.00 for intermediates, and $4.00 for "academic" students (apparently, ones of high school level), with half of tuition due in advance and the balance due at session's end (January, 1872). Dr. J. C. Daily was listed as the Institutes Board of Trustees president. (NOTE: This is the only actual evidence found of a private school in this area, though several references to other schools were found in research material.)

The late Bertha Engels Gaskill, daughter of W. H. Engels, began at Ebenezer in 1877. She reminisced to Mrs. Hunter Broyles at one time that girls and boys were not allowed to play together then. Girls united for games of "ante-over" and hopscotch at playtime. According to Mrs. Gaskill, "free" school lasted three months each year; after that, each student paid a monthly tuition fee of $1.25. This tuition was often paid for with salt, bacon, "merchantable" corn and other grains, and tobacco (as was the case with the Kinnebrugh children, John and Isabella).

When the first brick housing for the area school was built in 1891, students carried books and sang as they marched two-by-two from Old Ebenezer to the new Farmington School. Bricks for the building were fired at the Allen place in Farmington. (A picture of this school can be found on page 84.)

The Farmington P.T.A. was organized in 1925 by a Mrs. Frost of Fayetteville and Mrs. Tom Eason, according to a report by Mrs. Ora B. Lewis (mother of Brooks Lewis of Farmington). The group had been operating for a few years previous to this on an unofficial basis. Its all-women membership included descendants of many of the town's pioneer families. Mrs. O. L. Curtis is believed to have been the first P.T.A. president. The group's first project was to raise money towards buying equipment for the new high school building planned for the next year. They formed a grade school Kiddy Band, complete with uniforms, that toured the area; several mock weddings were also held, and the group sponsored operettas and plays. A Home Demonstration Club, formed locally in 1936, later merged with the P.T.A.

Only ten grades were taught at Farmington when a new high school was built in 1926 by Oliver Tucker (father of Mrs. Beulah Davis, who is now in her 12th year as a teacher in the elementary school). This structure was later converted into part of the grade school and then into a storage building (1974). It was destroyed by fire in early 1975 and has since been bulldozed away.

Most students left school after graduation from the eighth grade. Farmington was finally classified for high school and began teaching all 12 grades, with the Class of 1928 (see page 56 for picture) the first to receive diplomas. (Many of these first graduates, such as Russell Broyles and Brooks Lewis, still live in this area; one, James Gore, teaches here at his alma mater).

Few records are available on the early Bethel Grove and Savoy schools, which consolidated into the Farmington School District in 1947. In 1941, according to an article in the NORTHWEST ARKANSAS TIMES, Bethel Grove School had 38 pupils in attendance; Mrs. Clarence Dees was principal and Mrs. Cener Robbins was primary teacher.

It may be noted that the Farmington Junior High athletic teams were once known as the "Blue Jays" - at least, they were at the time Priscilla Smith (now Mrs. James McCuistion) was editor of the CARDINAL CHIRPS, 1941 school newspaper. (A copy of an October, 1941 issue of the CHIRPS is reproduced on pages 106-107). The school yearbook was founded in 1948 by A. E. "Eddie" Simpson, who served as adviser. Jimmie King was the book's editor. THE CARDINAL '76 is the twenty-ninth Cardinal volume.

Shown at left is the high school built in 1926; at the time of this picture it was in use as part of the grade school. Burned out in 1975, the structure has been 'dozed away. (#48)

All throughout this century Cardinal basketball teams (both boys' and girls') have been local powers. A Sr. Boys team of the 1920's beat the University of Arkansas freshman team, 28-26; in 1975 the senior boys squad were district 1-B champs. In the Athletics section of this book can be found pictures of the girls' teams of the 1930's that were Washington County champions. A gym was erected in the early 1950's, making it no longer necessary to practice and play on muddy outdoor courts.

Football began at Farmington in the late 1950's, with the site of Cardinal Field obtained in 1962. Improving with the years, the senior football team won the Arkansas State "B" title in 1972. Repeating this feat in 1973, the Cards have continued as district champs for both years since. Cardinal Field now boasts a seating capacity of over 1100 and a press box. Junior high teams have also long been district powers.

Farmington Schools became classified as a "A" school during the 1968-69 school term, eight years after the main part of the present high school was built. Since that time several outbuildings have been constructed, there has been considerable remodeling, and in 1975 a six-room addition was added onto the south end of FHS. A new elementary school, featuring a circular design and the "open-classroom" concept, was completed in 1974 at a cost of approximately $355,000. The entire school plant now has an approximate, estimated value of over $1,400,000 compared to $12,000 in 1941.

Farmington Public Schools have progressed from a one-room, crude log cabin with a few dozen pupils and one teacher to a system encompassing nearly 39 acres with over 800 students enrolled and having a faculty of over 40 (not to mention cooks, janitors, and other employees). One will notice, upon careful study, that this growth and improvement has been due largely to the concern, time, money and effort devoted to the school by local citizens. The Farmington educational system has benefited in the past 148 years because of the area residents who have recognized the importance of youth and have dedicated themselves to the youth of their community.

Because of this devotion and dedication, Farmington's schools and students have flourished; with the prolongation of such attention, our school and our youth will continue to do so.

New Construction Expands School

Rapidly growing with its surrounding community, Farmington Public Schools has been the scene of a great amount of construction in recent years.

The high school was the focus of building and remodeling in '76. Six new classrooms were erected on the south end of the school.

Prior to the fall of 1975, the high school appeared as shown above. At right is a view of the new addition, with a close-up shown below.

The courtyard was enclosed to provide a study hall and an addition to the Home Ec Dept. Numerous areas, most notably the library and principal's office, experienced at least some extent of remodeling.

Growing and improving space for a growing and improving student body . . . a message for the future.

Activities Enliven Normal,

Activities, which include everything from a club to a play to just having fun, were a big part of the Farmington student's life in 1976.

On the club scene, several new organizations were begun this year. Future Business Leaders of America, FBLA, was chartered in the fall with 18 members. Proving to be an active group, FBLA made its mark in FHS life in its first year. The new drill team, formed near the end of the '75 Cardinal football season, made its debut in a big way by performing in Razorback Stadium at the FHS vs. Mt. Ida state playoff game.

"Dull" School Routine

Many FHS organizations received awards throughout the year. FBLA'er Carolyn Drain was elected that group's district reporter. Donna DeVault began serving as FHA Federation I secretary. In the publications area, the CARDINAL CRIER, school newspaper, was named Honorable Mention in General Excellence by the Arkansas High School Press Association (AHSPA); several staff members received individual awards (Including three superior ratings, the highest award given). CARDINAL editor Candice Chick was named one of four Yearbook Editors of the Year in Arkansas by the AHSPA for her work on this twenty-ninth volume yearbook.

April saw the production of the Drama Club play, "Aunt Tillie Goes To Town," a great success. And there was the annual junior-senior prom and banquet, an event looked forward to all year long.

Another Year Passes — Too Quickly?

"Desolate" well describes FHS on the last day of school. Gone were the noisy students; gone were the overflowing lockers, the monotonous routine. And, gone were friends, enemies - those who shaped our lives. Gone was the school year 1976 . . . too quickly, for some; not quickly enough, for others.

During the past year we have made progress, and the student body has contributed greatly to this progress. I would like to congratulate this Annual Staff for their hard work and the production of an outstanding annual.

To the students of the Farmington School, I extend my hope that you will set goals for yourselves and have definite plans for reaching those goals. With these goals you will become the person that you want to become and no more. The goals that you set, you will find a way to reach during your lifetime. This will take hard work and determination from each of you, but you will find that good things in life require sacrifices. There is no greater feeling than knowing you have done a good job and have accomplished your goals.

I have enjoyed my association with each and every one of you during these past three years, and I wish for you all of the success and happiness that you so richly deserve. I sincerely hope that you will remain proud and supportive of your fine schools and community.

Sincerely yours,

VOL. 1 FARMINGTON Tuesday, October 28, 1941 ARKANSAS No. 3.

Mrs. Roberta Fulbright Was Assembly Speaker Tuesday

"Stand up for your own ideas, never give up," said Mrs. Roberta Fulbright, publisher of the North-west Arkansas Times, Fayetteville, as she spoke to the student body in the weekly assembly Tuesday, October 21.

Mrs. Fulbright said her philosophy of life had always been as Robert Louis Stevenson said: "The world is so full of a number of things, I'm sure we should all be as happy as kings. Mrs. Fulbright also said her motto was "Never Be Bored."

Melva Hembree, acting as chair man, introduced the speaker.

Journalism Class Has First Interview

Practicing what they had taught from their textbooks, the journalism class interviewed Mrs. Fulbright after her talk in assembly Tuesday morning, Oct. 21.

She says public schools are the threshing floors of education.

Mrs. Fulbright now owns the paper which her husband owned before they were married. When he died she bought both shares, she stated, answering the students' questions concerning her life. The students asked her many other questions, which Mrs. Fulbright willing and graciously answered.

School Appreciates Privilege of Hearing Good Speakers

Our school has been most fortunate in the accomplished speakers who have consented to address either the weekly assembly or the journalism class, or both. Last week's speaker was Mrs. Roberta Fulbright of Fayetteville. Previous speakers included: The Rev. H. H. Griffin of Walnut Grove, R. J. Kennan, county supervisor, Charles Morrow Wil-

School Board Member Dies

J.D. Couch, widely-known fruit and berry grower, died at his home early Saturday morning, October 18, after a long illness.

Mr. Couch was president of the Berry association for about 19 years.

He was also an active member of the Farmington school board for a number of years.

Funeral was held for Mr. Couch Sunday, Oct. 19 at 2 p. m. at the Church of Christ, Fayetteville. Burial was at Sons Chapel.

Junior Play to Be Staged November 12

"When Smith Stepped Out," a three-act comedy, is the play selected and to be given by the junior class, the night of November 12. Rehearsals are progressing according to schedule.

The cast consists of Billy Wise man, John Henbest, Jimmie Cowen, Kenneth Lowe, Priscilla Ann Smith, Wilma McDonald, Iva Dean Wetzel and Oace Lee West.

Other members of the junior class have charge of stage properties, sale of tickets and various other things relative to the play. Mrs. Ziegler, class sponsor, is doing the coaching.

Halloween Plans Under Way
The school is making plans for a Halloween carnival to be staged in the auditorium the night of October 31.

Each class in high school will be responsible for a booth or food stand. The grades will furnish the program. Proceeds will be for the benefit of the school.

"Keep Clean," 5th-and-6th Grade Slogan

"This is your washroom, help keep it clean," is the sign printed on the board in the 5th and 6th grade washroom.

These youngsters have chosen a washroom for their health project. The idea is to promote better health through cleanliness at school and in the home.

Although they haven't any conveniences such as sinks and running water, these children, with donations from their parents, have built a little washroom in one corner of their schoolroom. There are six washpans, four rolls of paper towels, two buckets of clean, fresh water and a nice, sanitary drain through which the water is poured. These utensils are placed in neat rows on well-built shelves, with a bar of soap by each pan.

WHAT IS YOUR MANNERS?

By EDNA MAE WEST
Do you bring your manners to school with you or leave them at home?

Do you speak when others greet you? Do you answer questions without being grouchy about it? Do you go out of your way to make new students feel at home? Do you say "pardon me," or "excuse me," when you should? Do you step aside for others to pass? or do you always have to be first up the stairs, down the steps or into the building?

If you have been leaving your manners at home, try bringing them to school with you and putting them to work. They will pay you big dividends in friends and happiness.

Students Are Required to Make Up Work. Hol Hum!

When a student is absent from class for any reason he is required to make up his work. Until this is done his absence is marked against him.

Blanks can be obtained at the office. When the teachers have signed said, indicating all work has been made up, the signed slips to be turned in and put on record.

Cardinal Seniors Divide With Winslow Squirrels Blue Jays Win Easily

By JOHN HENBEST
Farmington senior girls after overcoming a poor start had little trouble in defeating the Winslow middlebies in their second Conference battle at Winslow, Friday night, October 17.
Final score 35-11.

Hickman led her team by hitting the basket for 14 of their 35 points, which Smith followed closely with 12.

Duncan was responsible for five of Winslow's 11 points.

The Farmington girls played without the assistance of four first stringers, Babcock, showalter and the McDonald sisters.

Playing a ragged game throughout, the senior boys dropped their second Conference tilt to the Winslow Squirrels 25-36.

Yerton was the high point man with 16 of their 36 points.

The Blue Jays found the Winslow Junior Squirrels easy picking, handing them a 26-2 defeat.

Lewis drummed up 12 of his team's 26 points, with Sholtus finding the basket for six more.

Mrs. Ray Gaskill, the former Miss Jo Ellen Hill, a junior of last year, visited school Friday afternoon. She took her regular place keeping time for the ball game here.

Miss Louie J. Howard, a former graduate of Farmington, kept score for the ball game Friday.

Frank Blew was again called to referee the basketball game.

Blue Jays Wallop Cane Hill Basketeers

Norwood Pulls Boys' Game Out of Fire
Having the advantage of playing on their own court the Blue Jays handed a pair of defeats to a Cane Hill aggregation here Friday afternoon.

The Blue Jay girls, wearing new suits of blue trunks and white middiees, and having superior height to aid them, had little trouble trouncing their smaller foes from the southwest part of the county and piled up a score of 22 to 4.

The junior boys, without benefit of their spark plug, Lewis, got off to a slow start and had to depend on substitutes to pull the game out of the fire in the last minutes of play.

Norwood, midget substitute forward, battled the Cane Hill five to a standstill in the last quarter, bulldozing and tying the ball time after time, forcing the visitors to call time out twice in an attempt to stem the Blue Jay rally and hold their slim lead. Two baskets from the field in the last minutes of play sent the visitors home smarting from a 10 to 14 defeat.

The Cardinals were idle due to a wet court at Elkins where they were to engage Elkins boys and girls in their third conference game. The postponed game will

Mr. Starr was selected as sponsor.

The freshmen elected class officers in their home room on a recent Friday, with Mr. Broyles selected as sponsor. Officers chosen were: Edward Sholtus, president; Twila Mai Drake, vice-president, and Mary Thorpe, secretary and treasurer.

Latin Club Started Officers Elected

Interest was aroused in the Latin class when Mrs. Ziegler, Latin teacher, announced that a club was to be started.

Officers elected for the club were: Billy Hall, president; Mae Fritch, vice-president; Edwin Fitch, secretary, and Jean Ziegler, treasurer.

Mrs. Ziegler stated that a Latin club meeting will be held once a month and a party at least once a semester.

The children in the primary room have been cutting out leaves for autumn decorations.

The first grade pupils surprised their mothers Monday evening by taking home their new books the first time to show how nicely they can read.

Vernon Lowe of the sixth grade has gone to Tulsa where he will attend school while his father is employed there.

Alice Lynn Hart has re-entered school after a week's trip to Portales, New Mexico.

Unknown Latin

A very comical event occurred in the study hall. The Latin class was singing "The Star-Spangled Banner." According to the study hall teacher, the students who aren't taking Latin didn't know whether to sit or stand.

A Freshman's Work

The freshman English class is now memorizing an original poem, "The Eight Parts of Speech," written by a freshman.

One of the freshmen will be chosen to give it as a reading in convocation soon.

Along with the memory work, the freshmen are studying noun, adjective and adverbial phrases. Mrs. Ziegler, the English teacher, said the freshmen were making good preparations for their English class.

Chartered in the fall of 1975, the Farmington chapter of the Future Business Leaders of America was very active in its first year.

An officer installation ceremony was held in November in cooperation with the Fayetteville High School/West Campus FBLA. Officers were: President, Pat Edmondson; Vice-Pres., Diane Pliler; Sec., Candice Chick; Treas., Jodie Burnett; Rep., Peggi Pliler.

Pat E. and Diane P. attended the state March-of-Dimes convention at mid-year as FHS's representatives. MOD is the official FBLA service project each year. The club joined with Jr. Beta in serving as the Farmington sponsor of the Walk-a-Thon in March.

Eight members went to the District Leadership Conference in February, at which FHS'er Carolyn Drain was elected 1976-77 District I Reporter, and Candice Chick placed second in Sr. Clerk-Typing competition. Several members also attended the annual State Leadership Conference in April at Little Rock.

Fund-raising activities for the group during '75-'76 included a car wash and the selling of Tom-Wat products.

With their motto of "Forward in the Spirit of '76," FBLA proved to be one of Farmington's more active student organizations. Sponsor was Miss Kay Dardin.

The Fife, Drum, and Bugle Corps consists of music combined with precision drill. Farmington is the only school in the South or Southwest with such a corps. The corps sponsor is Mr. Harold Perry.

There are 12 buglers, 12 drummers, and 12 fifers. Also 5 color guards, 2 banner carriers, 3-6 drum majorettes, and 1 drum major. The uniforms were furnished by the school. The Third Infantry Old Guard, the oldest fife, drum, and bugle corps in the nation, is serving as an advisor to the corps. It is stationed at Fort Monroe, Virginia. Also the Company of Fifers and Drummers in Connecticut is an advisor.

PICTURE TAKEN IN FRONT OF THE SHINN HOME, BUILT SOMETIME IN THE LATE 1800's. IT HAS BELONGED TO BILL MAYES AND WALTER PETTIGREW IN THE PAST.

"Busy!" describes the Yearbook/Newspaper Staff throughout the 1975-76 school year. The year began with the purchase of a 35-mm. camera, complete with an automatic flash and telephoto lens; then came the studying of journalism and of methods of yearbook and newspaper production. Following this was the actual work.

The staff, who got a late start on THE CARDINAL '76 by starting in October, worked hard all year to produce the Bicentennial edition you're now reading. The book is much larger and has more features and special effects than ever before.

Waiting until they could find a reasonable offset printer for the paper, the staff continued producing one issue each month after the first CARDINAL CRIER appeared in November. The CRIER was named "Most Improved" high school newspaper at the U. of A. Press Day in March. It was also entered in contests of the Arkansas High School Press Association in April (results not available by deadline).

The staff strove to improve itself and its publications by joining the Arkansas High School Press Association and by attending workdays and workshops in this area. Several members attended the AHSPA state conference in April at Little Rock.

All in all, it was a year of much change and improvement in Farmington school publications.

The staff found time to sponsor two activities for the student body: FHS's first Fifties Day and Sadie Hawkins/Hobo Day. Prizes were given for best dressed, and a sock hop and a hoedown were held at the football field.

They also performed Bicentennial skits as part of the yearbook sales drive. Gary Steele was Ben Franklin; Billy Ferguson proclaimed "The yearbooks are coming!" as Paul Revere.

The Future Homemakers of America is a large organization here at Farmington with 65 members. The sponsor is Mrs. Jeanette Robbins. Among their many activities of this year are the Athletic Breakfast, the Mother-Daughter Banquet, and the State Convention in Little Rock. They won the Sweepstakes on their fair booth in September, and the Federation meeting was held here for the local FHA'ers.

FHA's national objective is to help youth assume their roles in society through Home Economics Education in areas of personal growth, family life, vocational preparation, and community involvement.

Members vote on important issues.

The Auto Mechanics program, which started last year, deals mainly with giving its students practical experience. The boys enrolled in this course are given the opportunity to work on their cars, along with doing both body and mechanical work on lawnmowers, motorcycles, buses, and most any kind of machine that comes along. They also do some studying in textbooks and some welding.

This popular vo-tech program has continued to be an important part of the curriculum. The boys' motto seems to be: "If you can't figure out what's wrong with your car or your project, hang around awhile - someone will come up with SOMETHING."

Health Occupations Education at FHS is concerned with the introduction of the high school student to the health careers. There are over 2200 job opportunities listed under some 700 major health-career vocations.

HOE students study the various health professions - what they are in reference to supply and demand, monetary rewards, and basic job descriptions. Many students cooperated with the GCE program and worked in local doctor's offices and health institutions, gaining practical experience in health care.

The 7th grade basketball team this year was small, inexperienced, and without much practical knowledge of the game of basketball. The boys played only four regular season games, but held numerous scrimmages, both within the squad and with the 6th grade team.

Coach Center looks for the boys to help the Junior High basketball team next year, feeling that with dedication and hard work they will become fine representatives of Cardinal basketball.

Today's Army has more good jobs to fill than anybody.

We make job hunting easy for you.

For starters, we offer over 300 jobs. And you don't have to worry about experience or training. We'll give you that.

Next, we have Army Representatives who'll help you get the job you want, where you want to do it. All you have to be is qualified.

And you won't have to quibble about pay. Everyone starts at $344.10 a month before deductions. With fringe benefits no civilian job can touch.

If you're looking for a job that's as good as you are, call or see your nearby Army Representative.

These people have shown their support of Farmington Public Schools and its publications with financial donations to THE CARDINAL '76.

Kindergartners graduate to the first grade . . . on their way to a future that will see them as the FHS Class of '88.

1976 - America's Bicentennial. Two hundred years of progress and endurance worth celebrating. Two hundred years that have set a strong foundation on which to build the future.

The future can only be what we make it - by working together and combining skills and talents toward a common goal. The closeness of the student body and faculty of Farmington Public Schools should prove an asset to its students in the future.

The year 1976 was a great year of improvement in our school system on many levels. The Yearbook/Newspaper Staff are quite proud of our own advancement, but we can't claim ALL the credit . . . we had a lot of help from many people. We must give special thanks to Mr. Lynch, Mr. Bisher, Don's Studio, Butch's Camera Shop, and all the students and the residents of our community for their support and encouragement in this project.

On another note, you may have noticed numbers (enclosed in parentheses) included in the captions of many pictures. These are "control numbers" provided to help the public order copies of pictures appearing in the CARDINAL. A copy of any picture with a control number may be ordered at the price of $5.00 for each 5" x 7" black-and-white glossy. Copies of most group photos may also be ordered for $3.00 per 5" x 7".

Pride is the keyword of this year of celebration. We can be proud of our schools and community. It is the sincere hope of the Yearbook/Newspaper Staff that this book will serve as an aid in bringing back memories and in educating you in the history of your community.

Planning the future by evaluating the past . . . may this volume help in Farmington's preparation for the years to come.

YEARBOOK/NEWSPAPER STAFF

The class of '76 . . . ending one life, but their future is just beginning.
